publisher's notes

We are pleased to present in this issue the award winners, two model offices and two outstanding exhibitors at the NOFA (National Office Furniture Association) Conference recently held in Philadelphia. This was an outstanding exhibition, larger than last year, and from all indications due to continue a normal healthy growth. There were a number of new important exhibitors who presented their designs for the first time. All in all, it was a very creditable exhibition, and its future development appears to be a very progressive one.

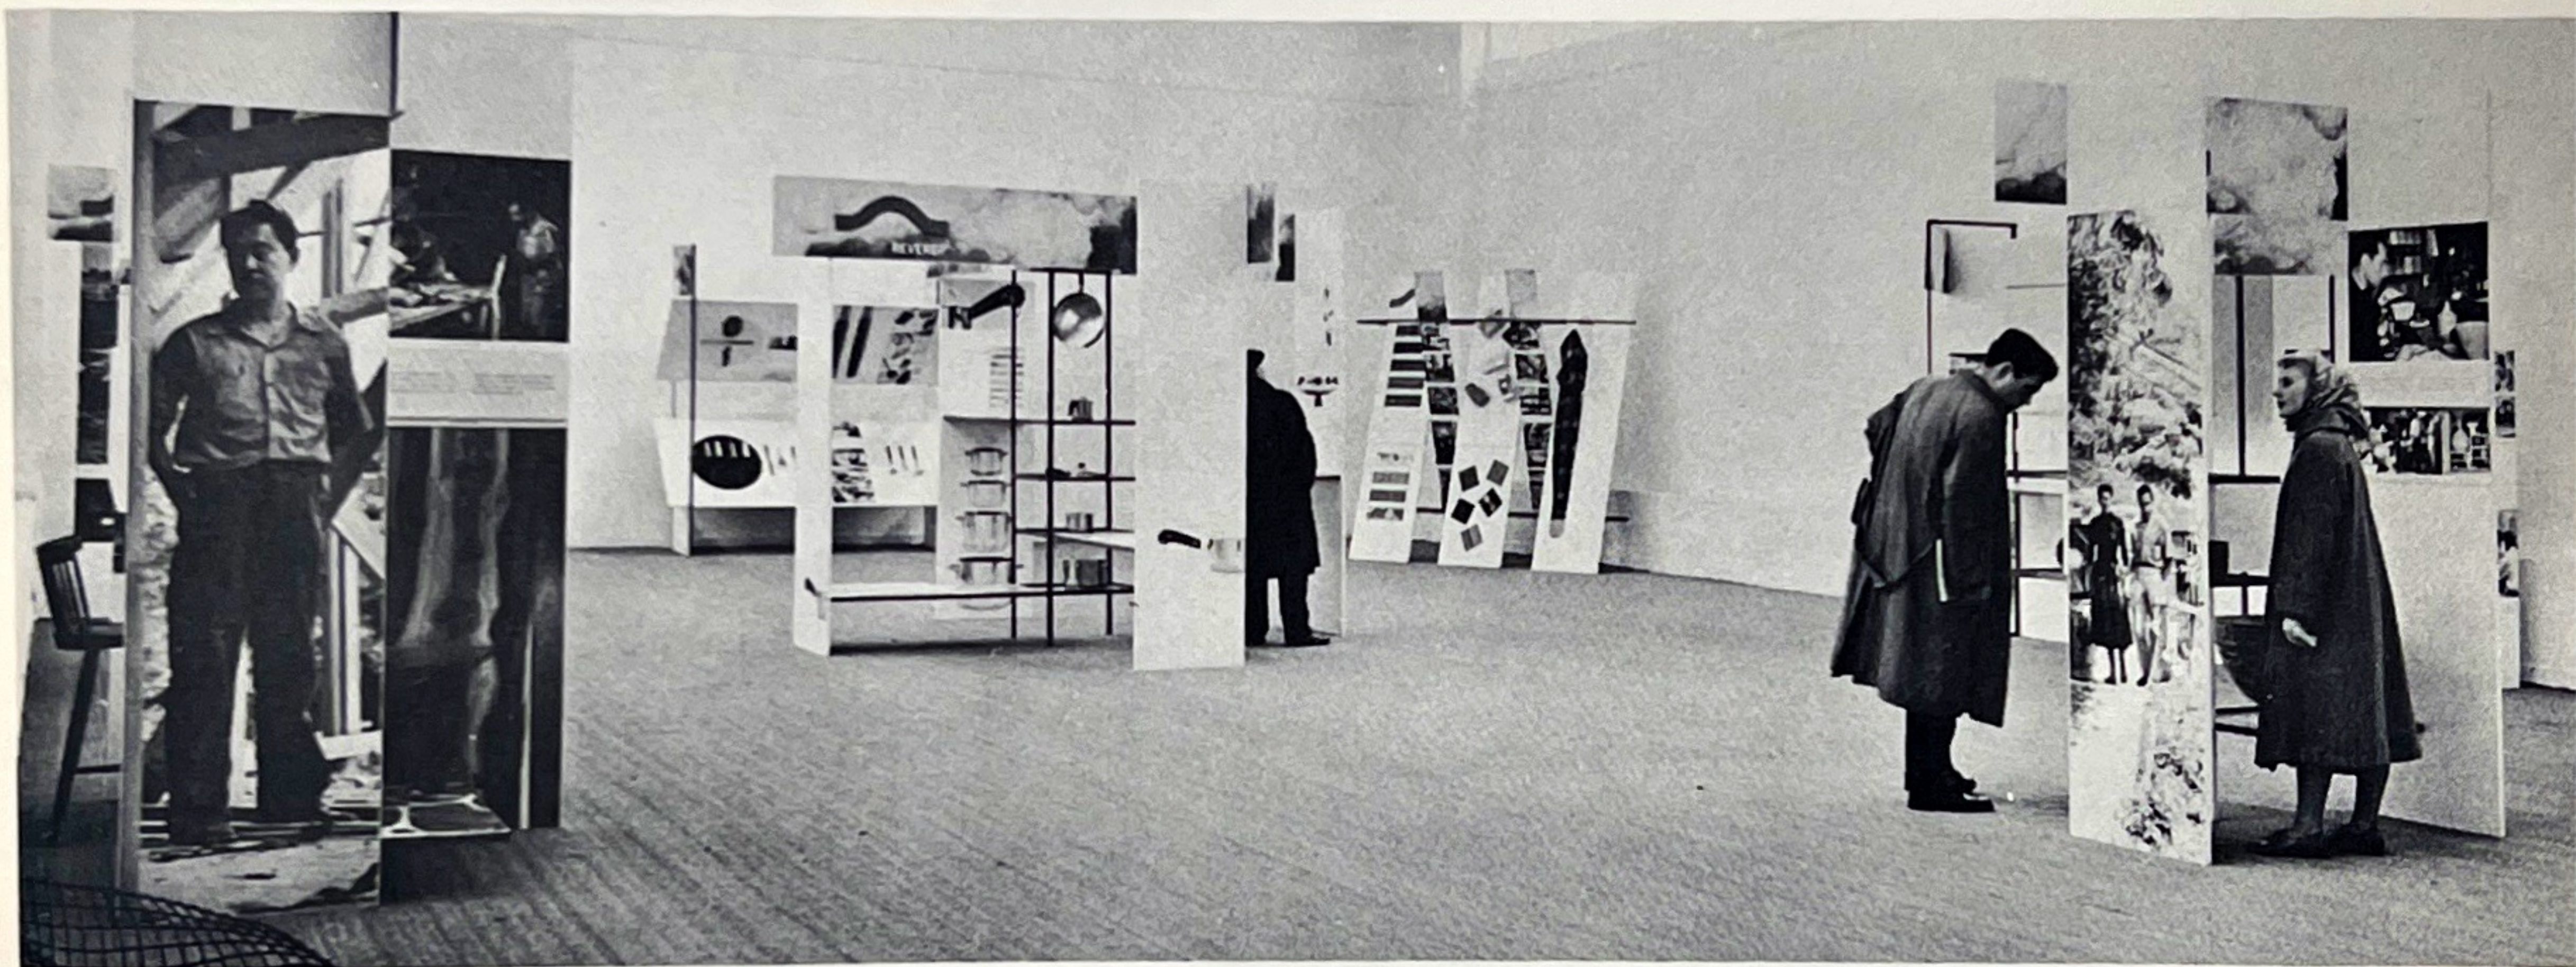

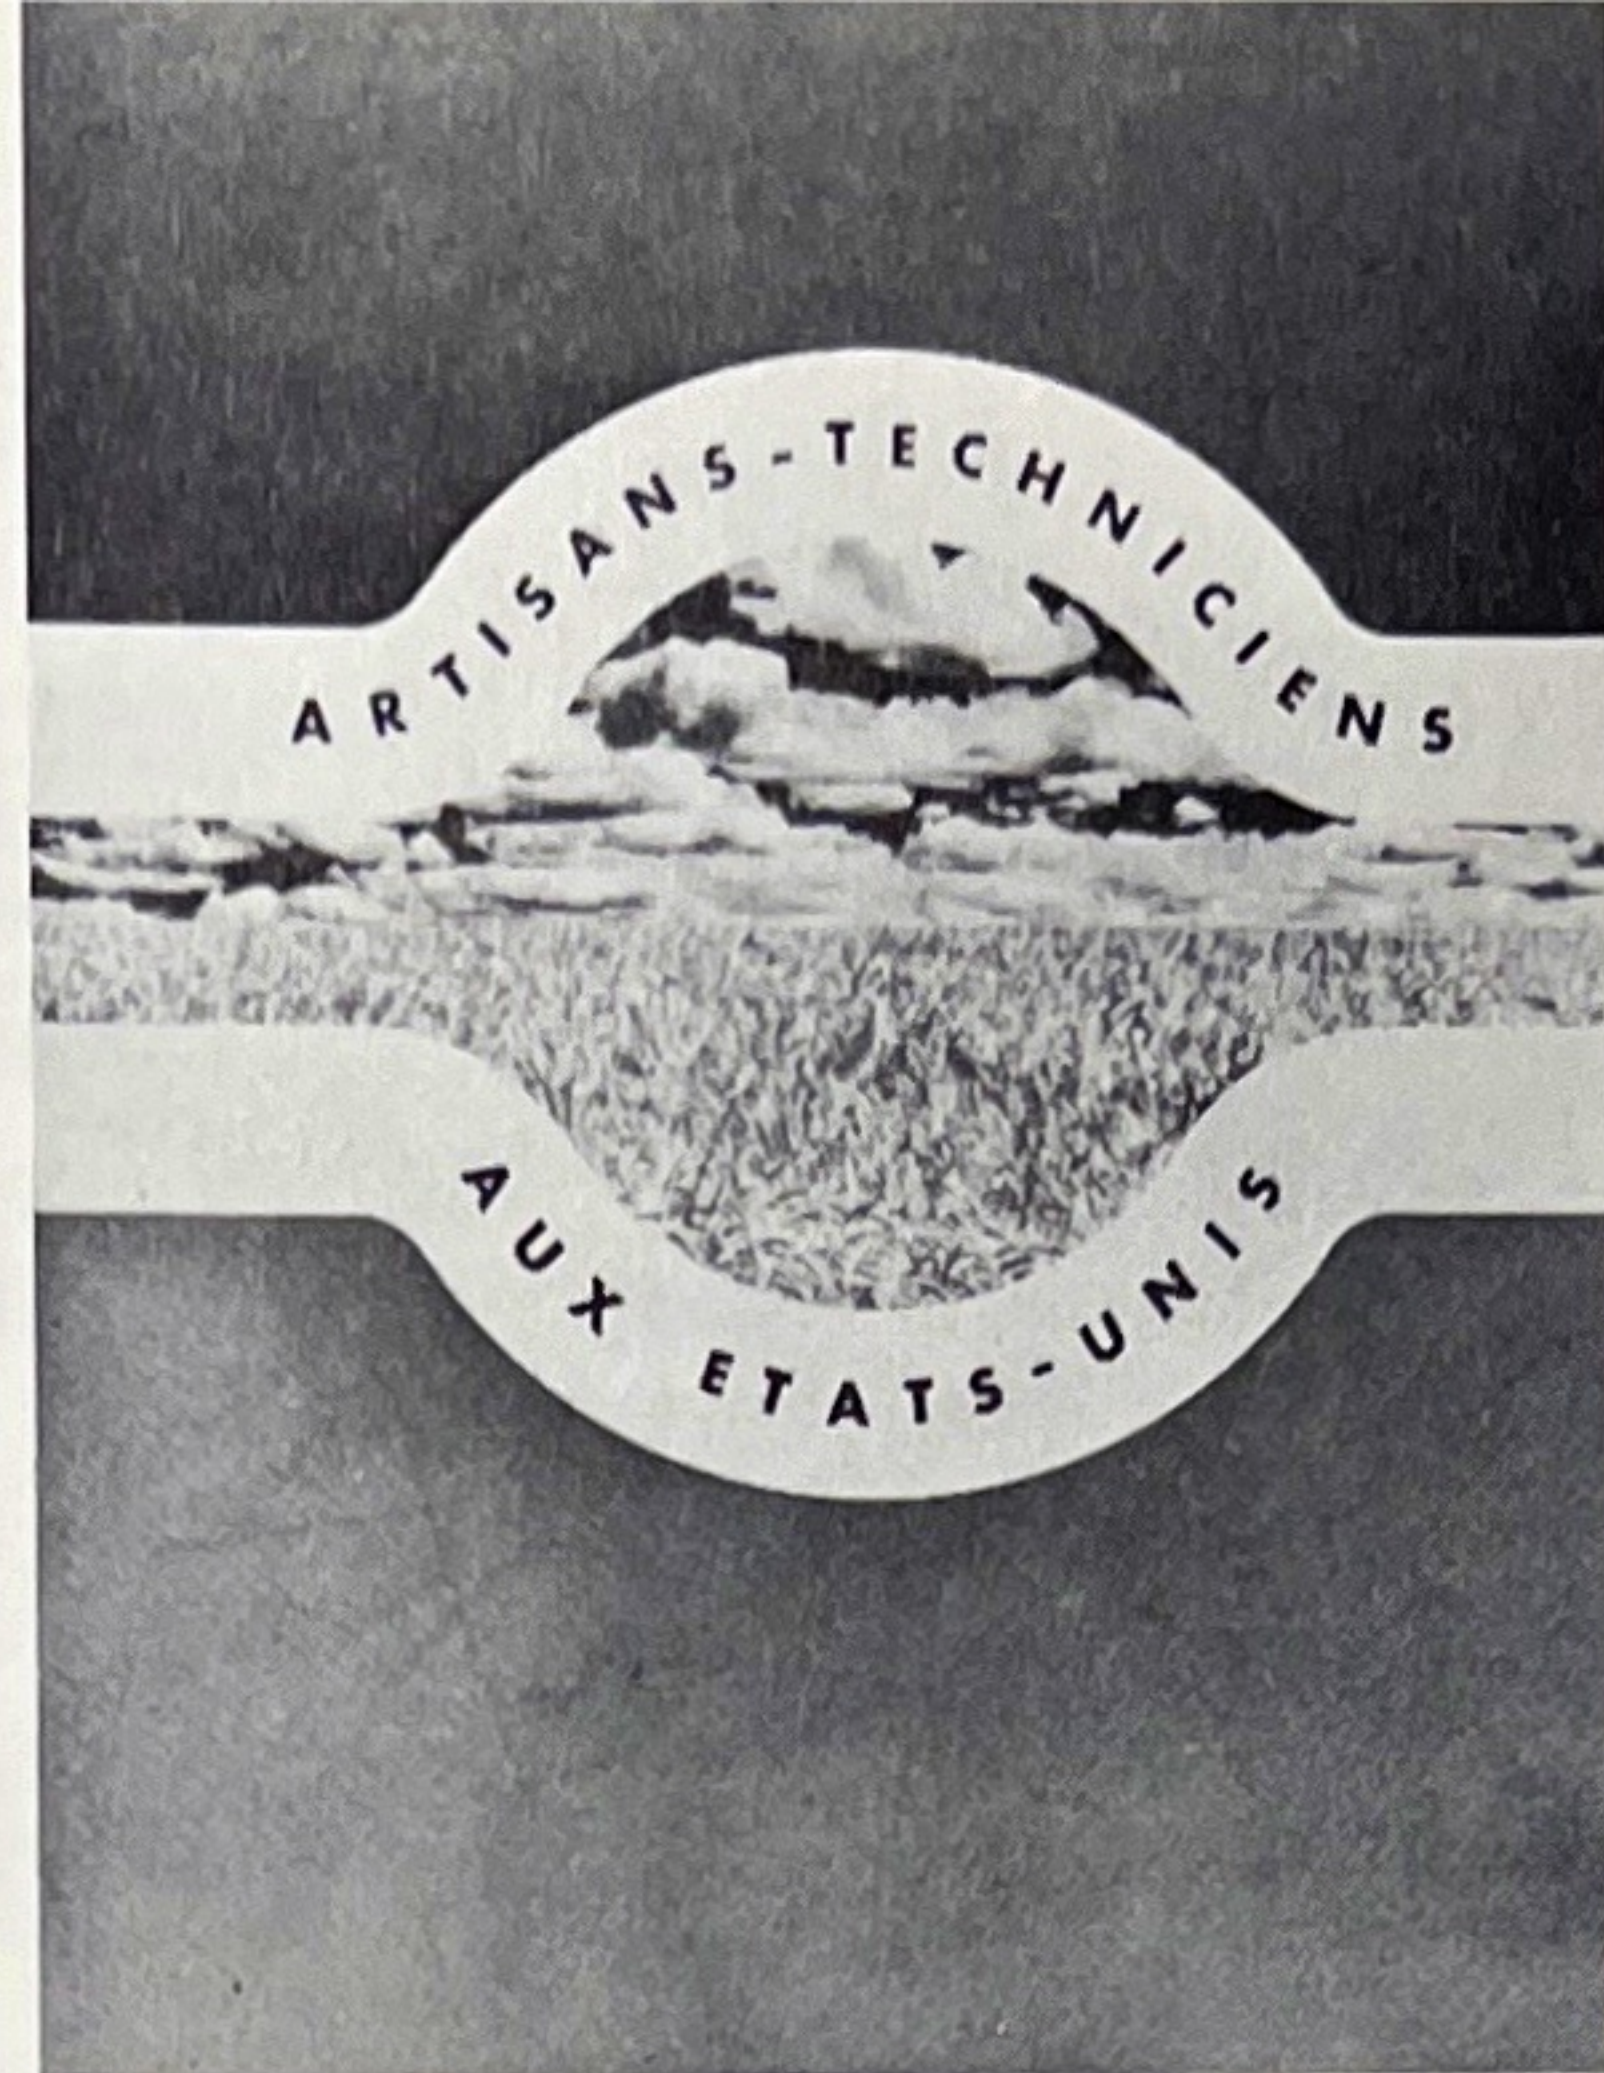

Under the capable directorship of Edgar Kauffman, Jr., an exhibition of U. S. Industry and Crafts entitled, "CRAFTSMANSHIP IN A CHANGING WORLD" was presented at the Musee d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris.

Paul Mayen, well-known to our readers as the designer for Habitat, Inc. was the architect of the exhibition. Mr. Mayen has made possible some interesting photographs of the exhibition in general and some of the exhibits of well-known American designers. The photographic story is presented in this issue.

As we are about to go to press, the American Institute of Decorators will hold its 27th Annual Conference in historical Boston, May 18-22. One of the features of the conference will be the Design Competition Awards. FURNITURE FORUM will report the award winners in the next issue. Also on the program is an important topic: "Interior Design and Decoration—Professional Responsibility". This is indeed an important subject to our profession, and the high-lights of this discussion will be reported in an early issue.

As we approach the Summer Market, your editor cannot help but speculate as to the possible attendance and the general trend of sales activity from the manufacturers' point of view. While there have been no definite indications that the business slump or recession is over, there have been some heartening indications that conditions will improve during the last half, and particularly the last quarter of this year. The passing by the Senate and the House of the Housing Bill is a healthy sign, and it is to be hoped that building loans and mortgage money will loosen up appreciably. If the home, the apartment house, the hotel, the institutional building and the office building are not built, the need for interior furnishings has not been created, it is just that simple. The average $15,000 home, within the first 5 years, absorbs an average of $5,000 worth of interior furnishings. This includes furniture, floor coverings, fabrics, refrigerators, stoves and all general appliances. It has been stated that approximately 308 industries are involved in the building of a home. So, if the home is not built, the selling-market is affected in a very broad manner. This country NEEDS a consistent, steady building program. Unfortunately, there are many, many shortcomings in supplying the national requirement.

Poster for Paris opening of
"Craftsmanship in a Changing World" exhibit designed by Paul Mayen for United States Information Agency.

Industrial designer, Paul Mayen changed his boyhood ambition from bullfighter to artist when the Mayen family moved from Spain to New York. From high school, he went to Cooper Union and for the next few years he was a student by night and a tri-lingual translator by day. Coming out of war service, ex-Capitan Mayen, returned to Columbia, worked as Art Director at ad agencies, designed catalogs, exhibits and packaging for top firms in the architectural and building fields. Returning to Cooper Union as a member of the Faculty, he served there five years, then joined Parsons Institute where he taught his own course on structure and design.

In 1957, he started work on some of the liturgical objects and equipment in the famous Eero Saarinen moated chapel at M.I.T. Commissioned to design an exhibit, directed by Edgar Kaufman Jr., "Craftsman in a Changing World", sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, Mr. Mayen created displays to present fourteen case histories of American designers and their work. This exhibition is now travelling through Europe after its formal opening in Paris. Currently Mr. Mayen is now designing lighting for Habitat, Inc., redesigning packaging for recording equipment and is directing the art work for the AGFS camera ad campaign.

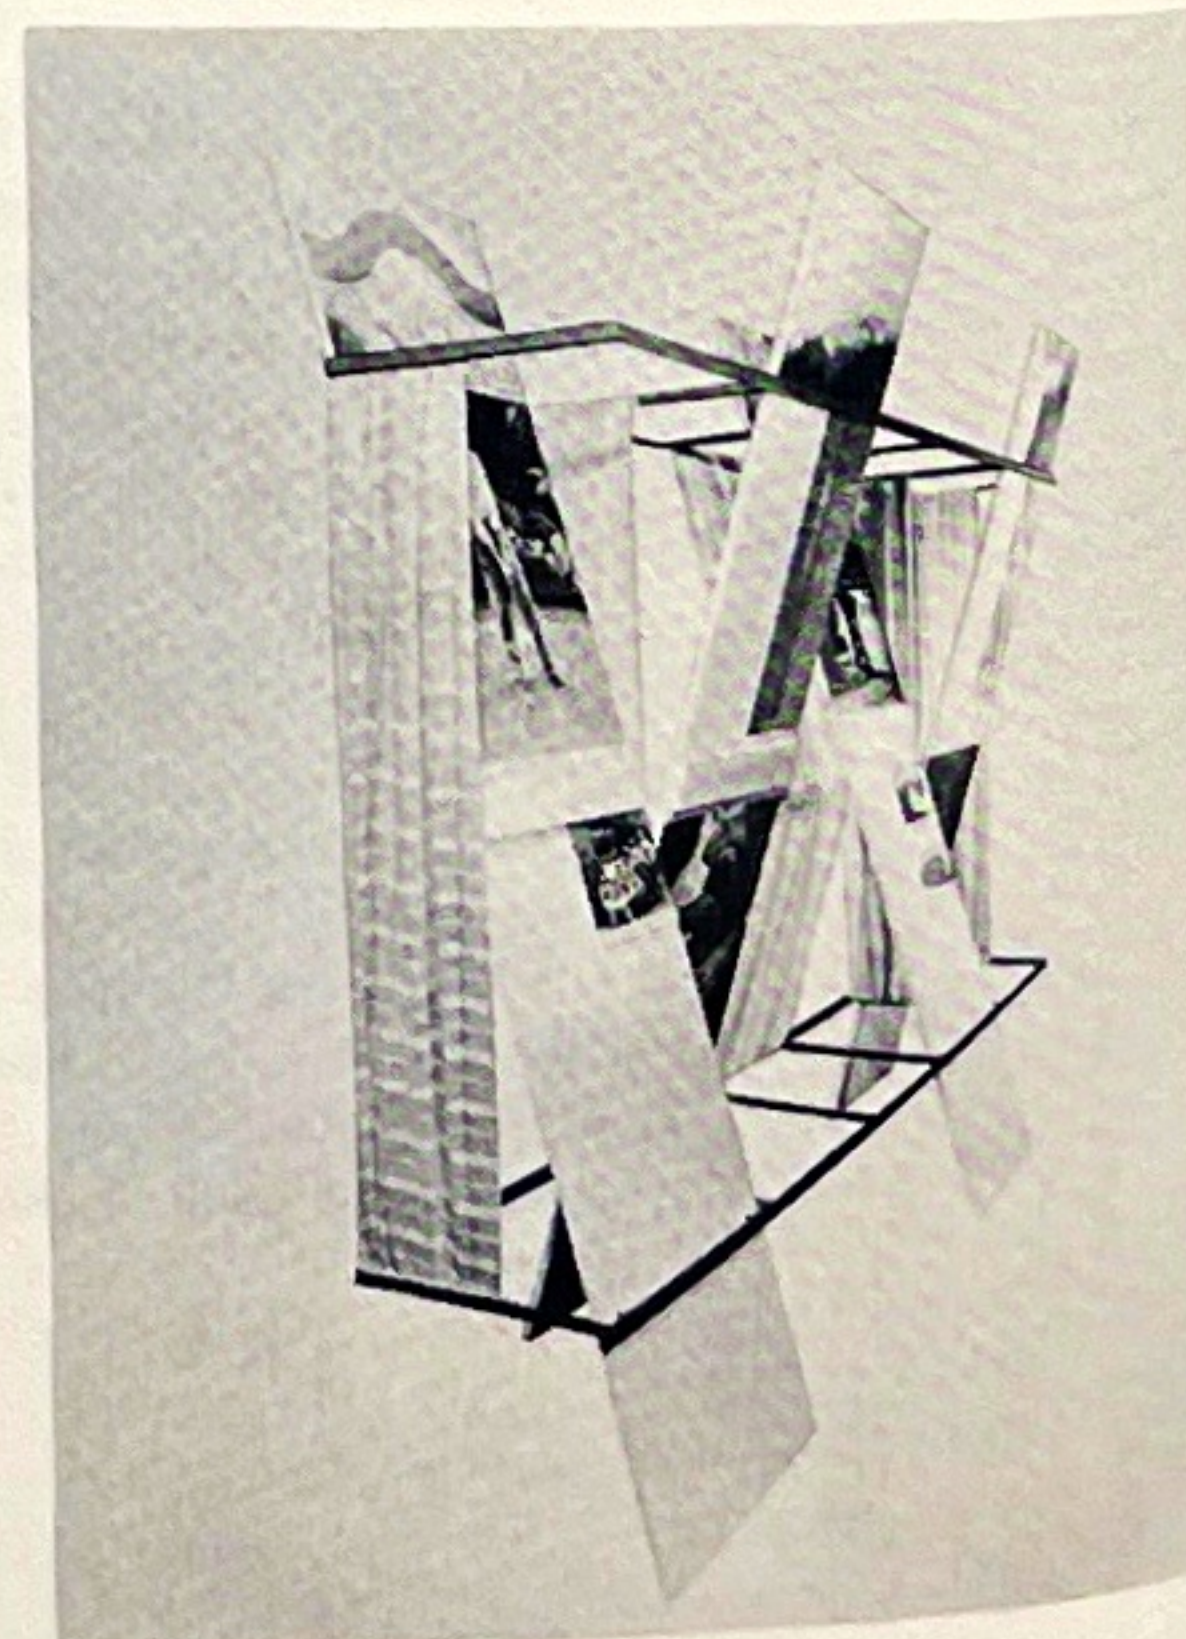

The names of Eames, Nakashima, Natzler, Mahsoud and Sitterle are well known and respected by contemporary-minded Americans and it was most fitting that their craftsmanship be shown to the European audiences.

"Craftsmanship in a Changing World" aims to give Europeans an intimate view of American designers, their aspirations and achievements. Also, to point-up the close relationship of industrial designers and industry working together to give Americans a better way of life.

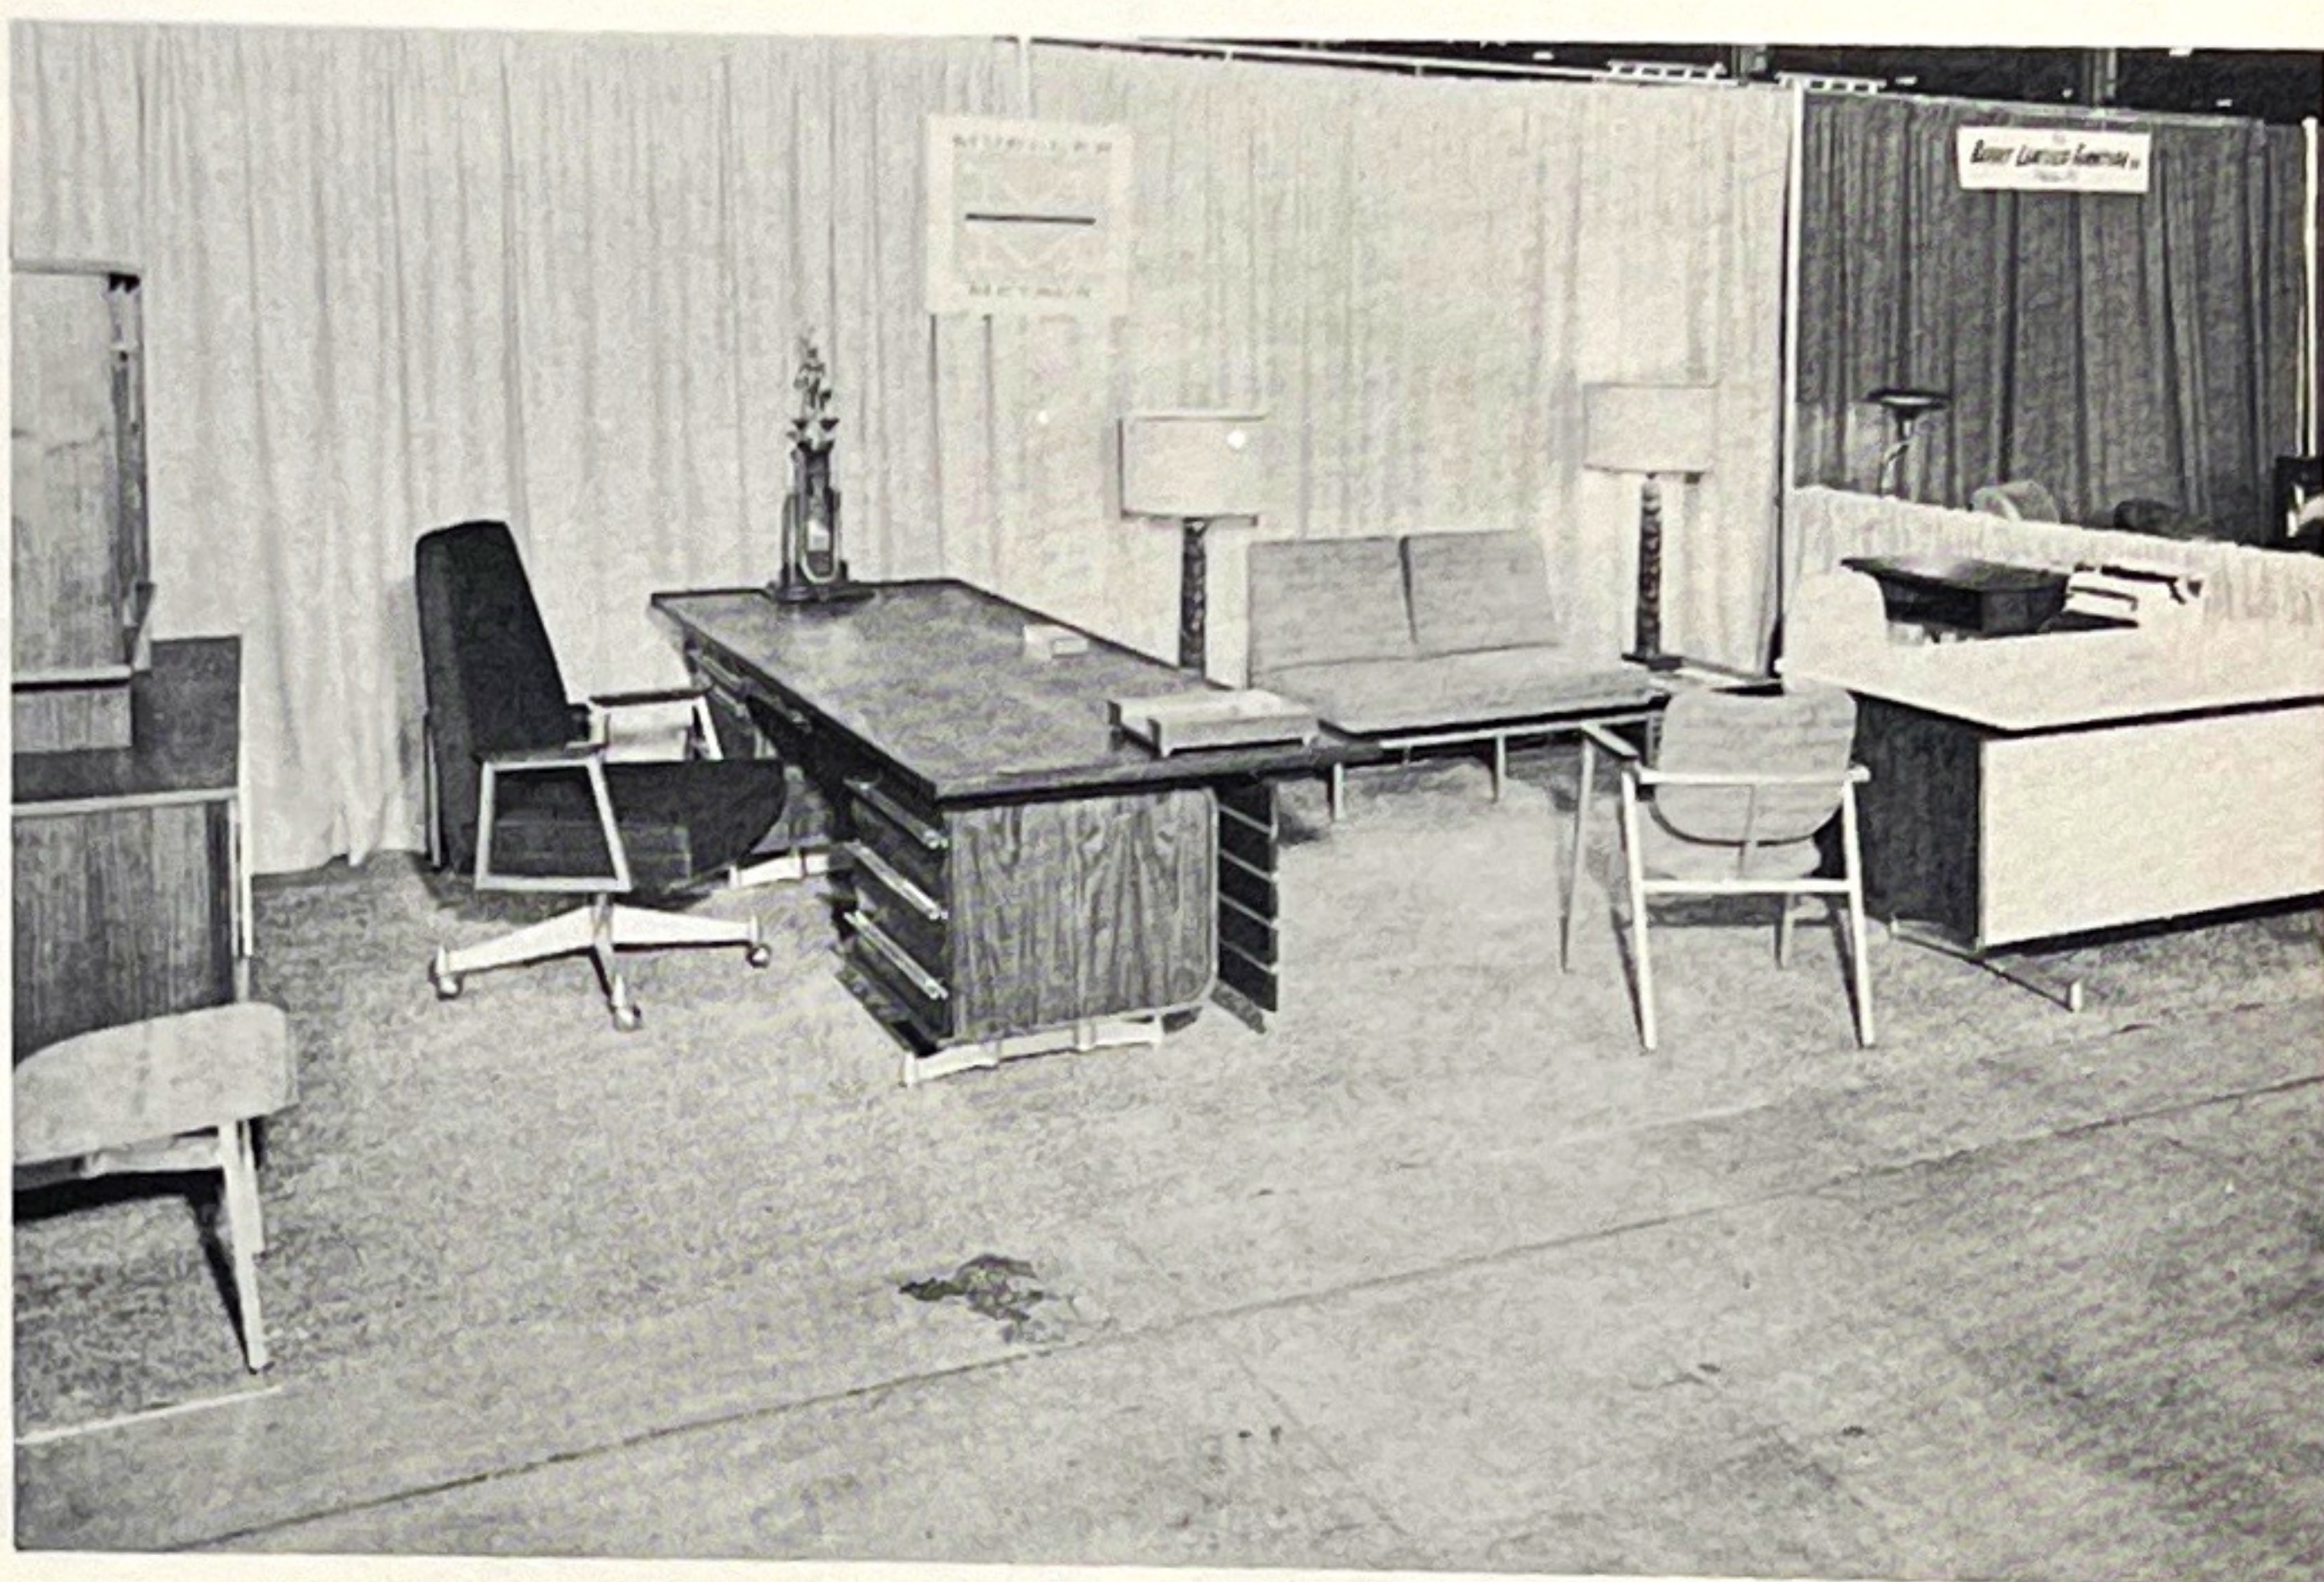

Actual products are shown in the displays, but the major portion of material consists of photographs by George Barrows, which by unusual cropping, blow-ups and novel juxtaposition, dramatized the exhibits.

An executive office designed by Everett Brown, A.I.D., for Jens Risom Design Inc. won the George W. Wray Award at the NOFA Convention in Philadelphia for the best exhibition booth. The award was made by the OFFUREPS, (Office Furniture Manufacturers' Representatives in the New York area). The setting was divided into a conference and work area by four walnut cabinets and white beaded curtains. The walnut single pedestal desk in the work area had a white Formica top. The executive swivel chair was upholstered in flame leather. The conference area featured a walnut table with revolving top. The right wall was panelled in cross sections of architectural bamboo in a honeycomb design.

The Mueller Metals exhibit designed by Ralph Logan, won the Arndt, Preston, Chapin, Lamb & Keen Award for the most progressive approach to selling office furniture through style. Featured was a solid walnut executive desk with back panel and drawers trimmed with strips of magnesium. The base of the desk was also of magnesium.

William P. Reed, Publicity Director, Arndt, Preston, Chapin, Lamb & Keen is shown presenting the Award trophy to Fritz Mueller Jr., President of Mueller Metals, Grand Rapids. Looking on is Ralph Logan, Mueller Metal's designer, who also designed the exhibition booth.

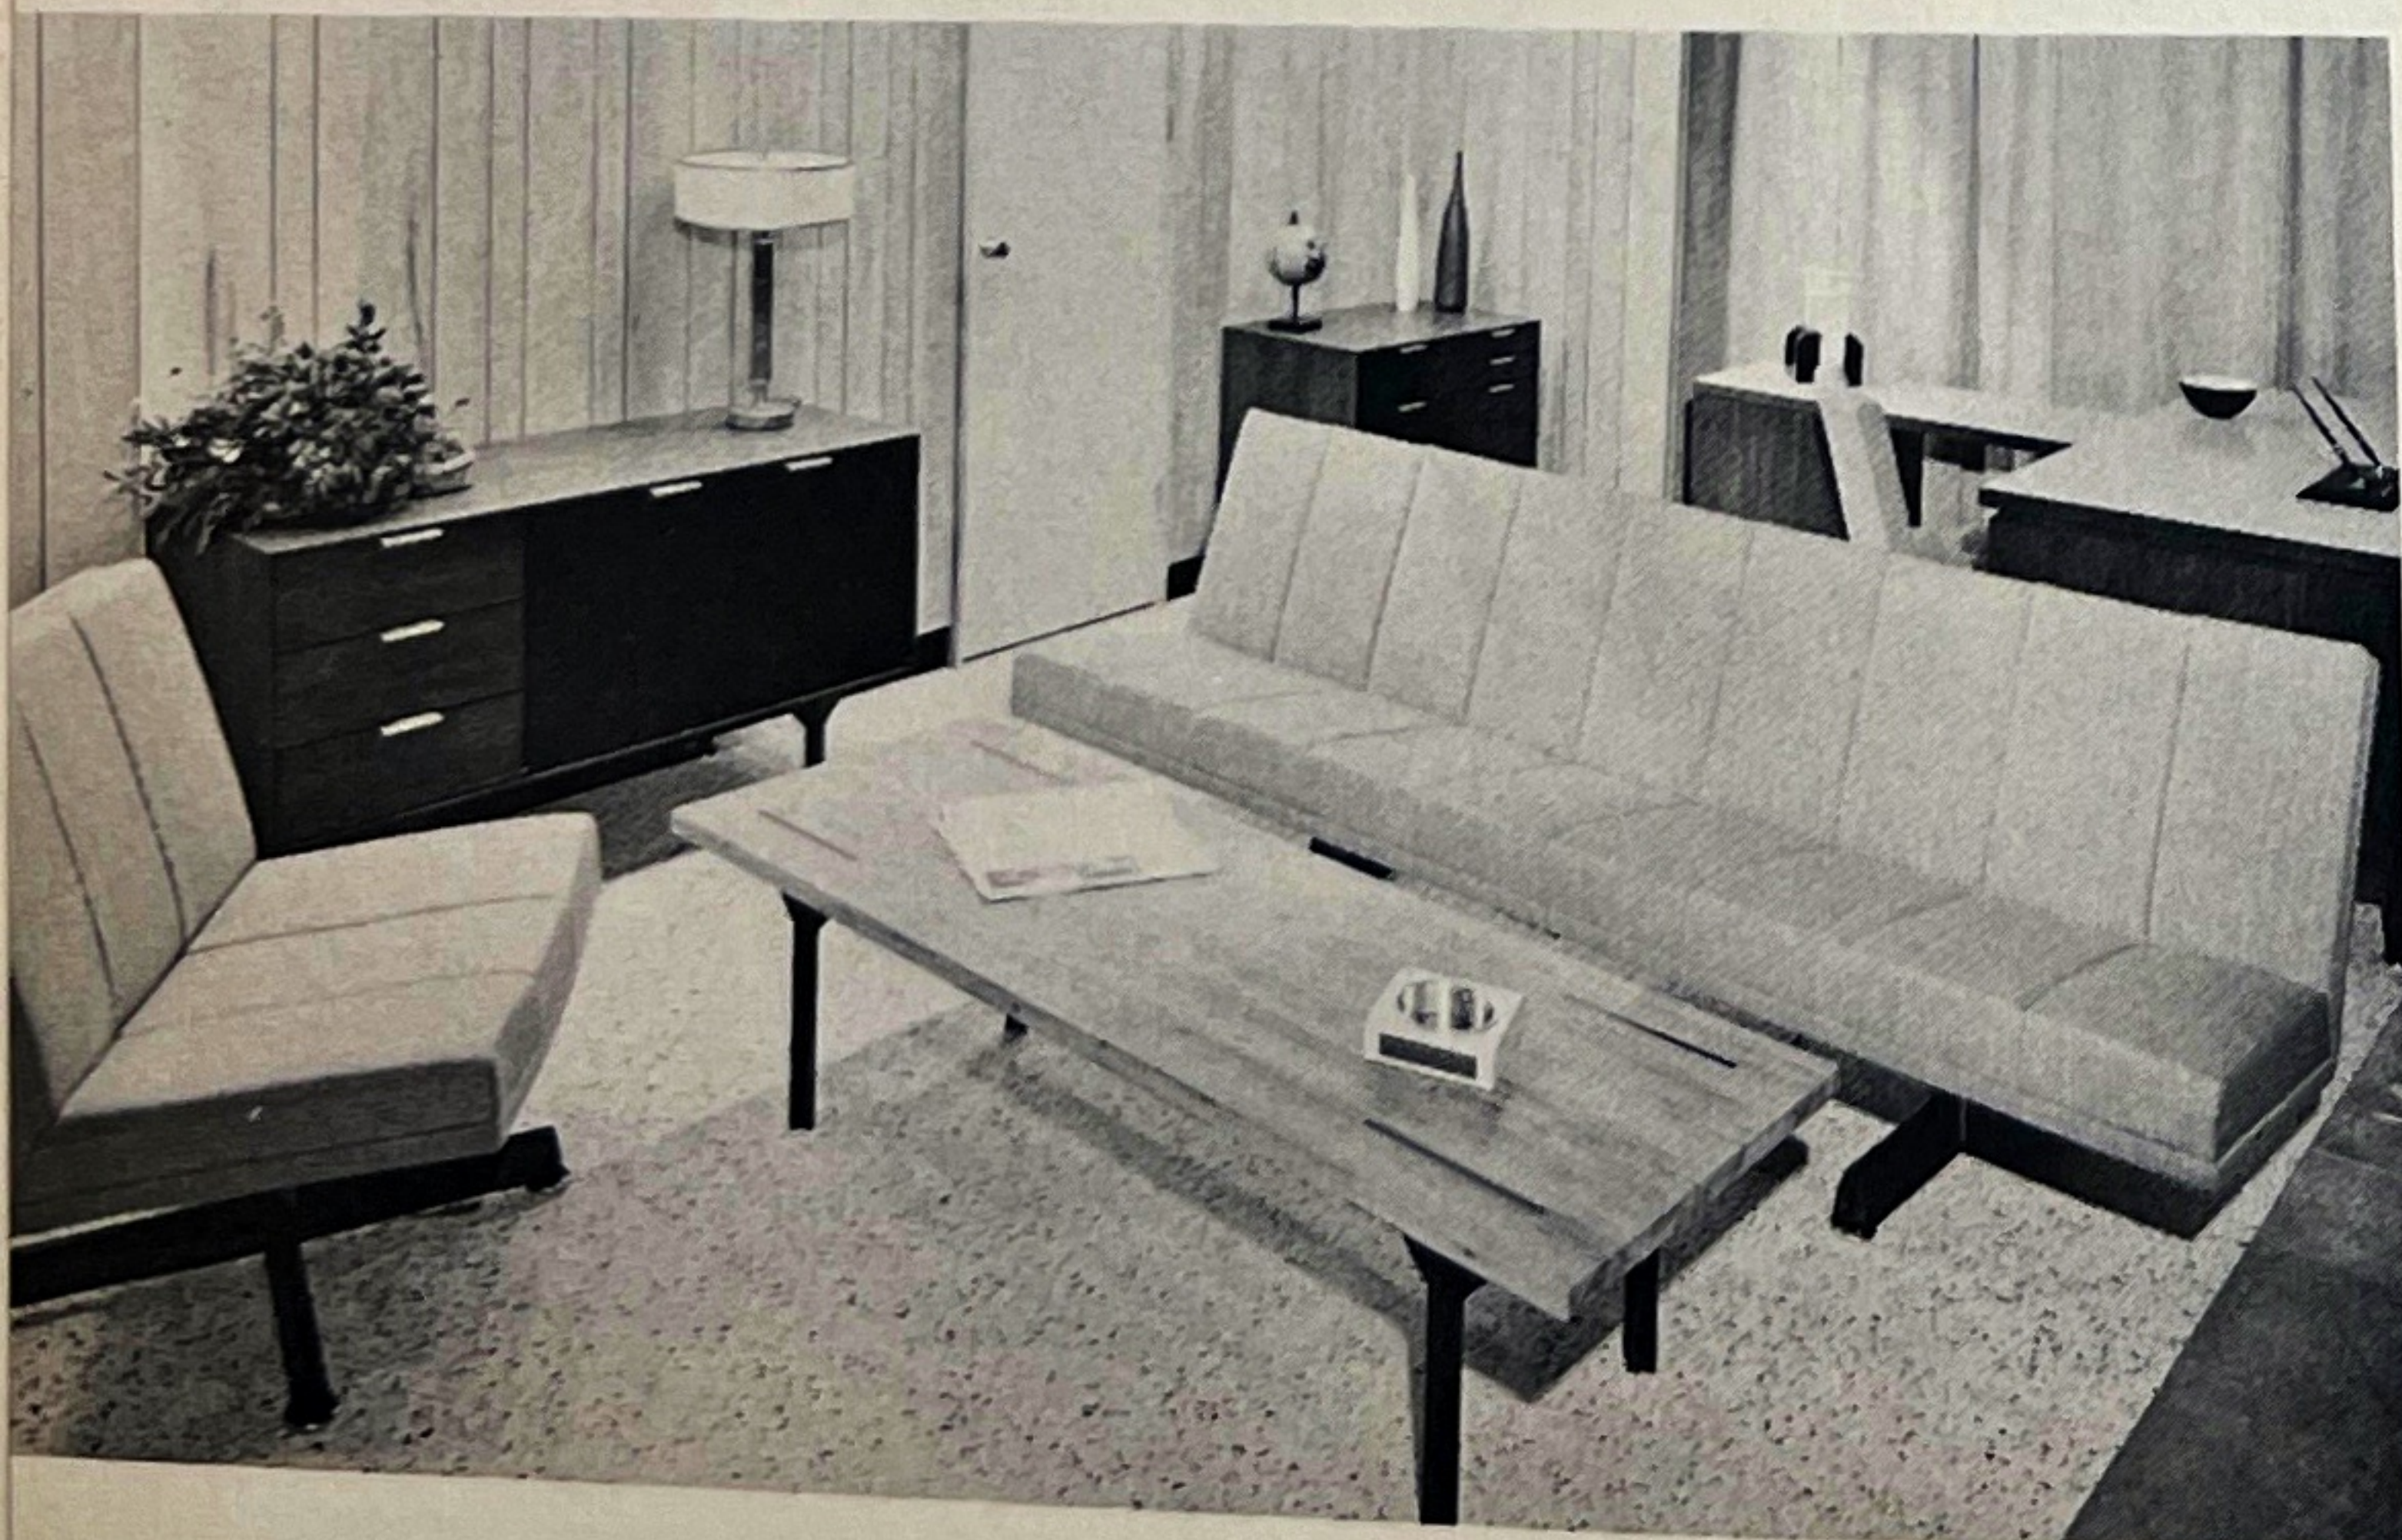

Harvey Probbler exhibited his new executive, "Inner Office Collection". Featured is the 100" desk top which is mahogany parquet with flared edge, and tapered and faceted panel base. A new, low height, 25" above the floor, was used to create an atmosphere of informality. The mahogany was finished in "Spaniel". The executive swivel chair is covered with a plastic fabric which was also used on the walls.

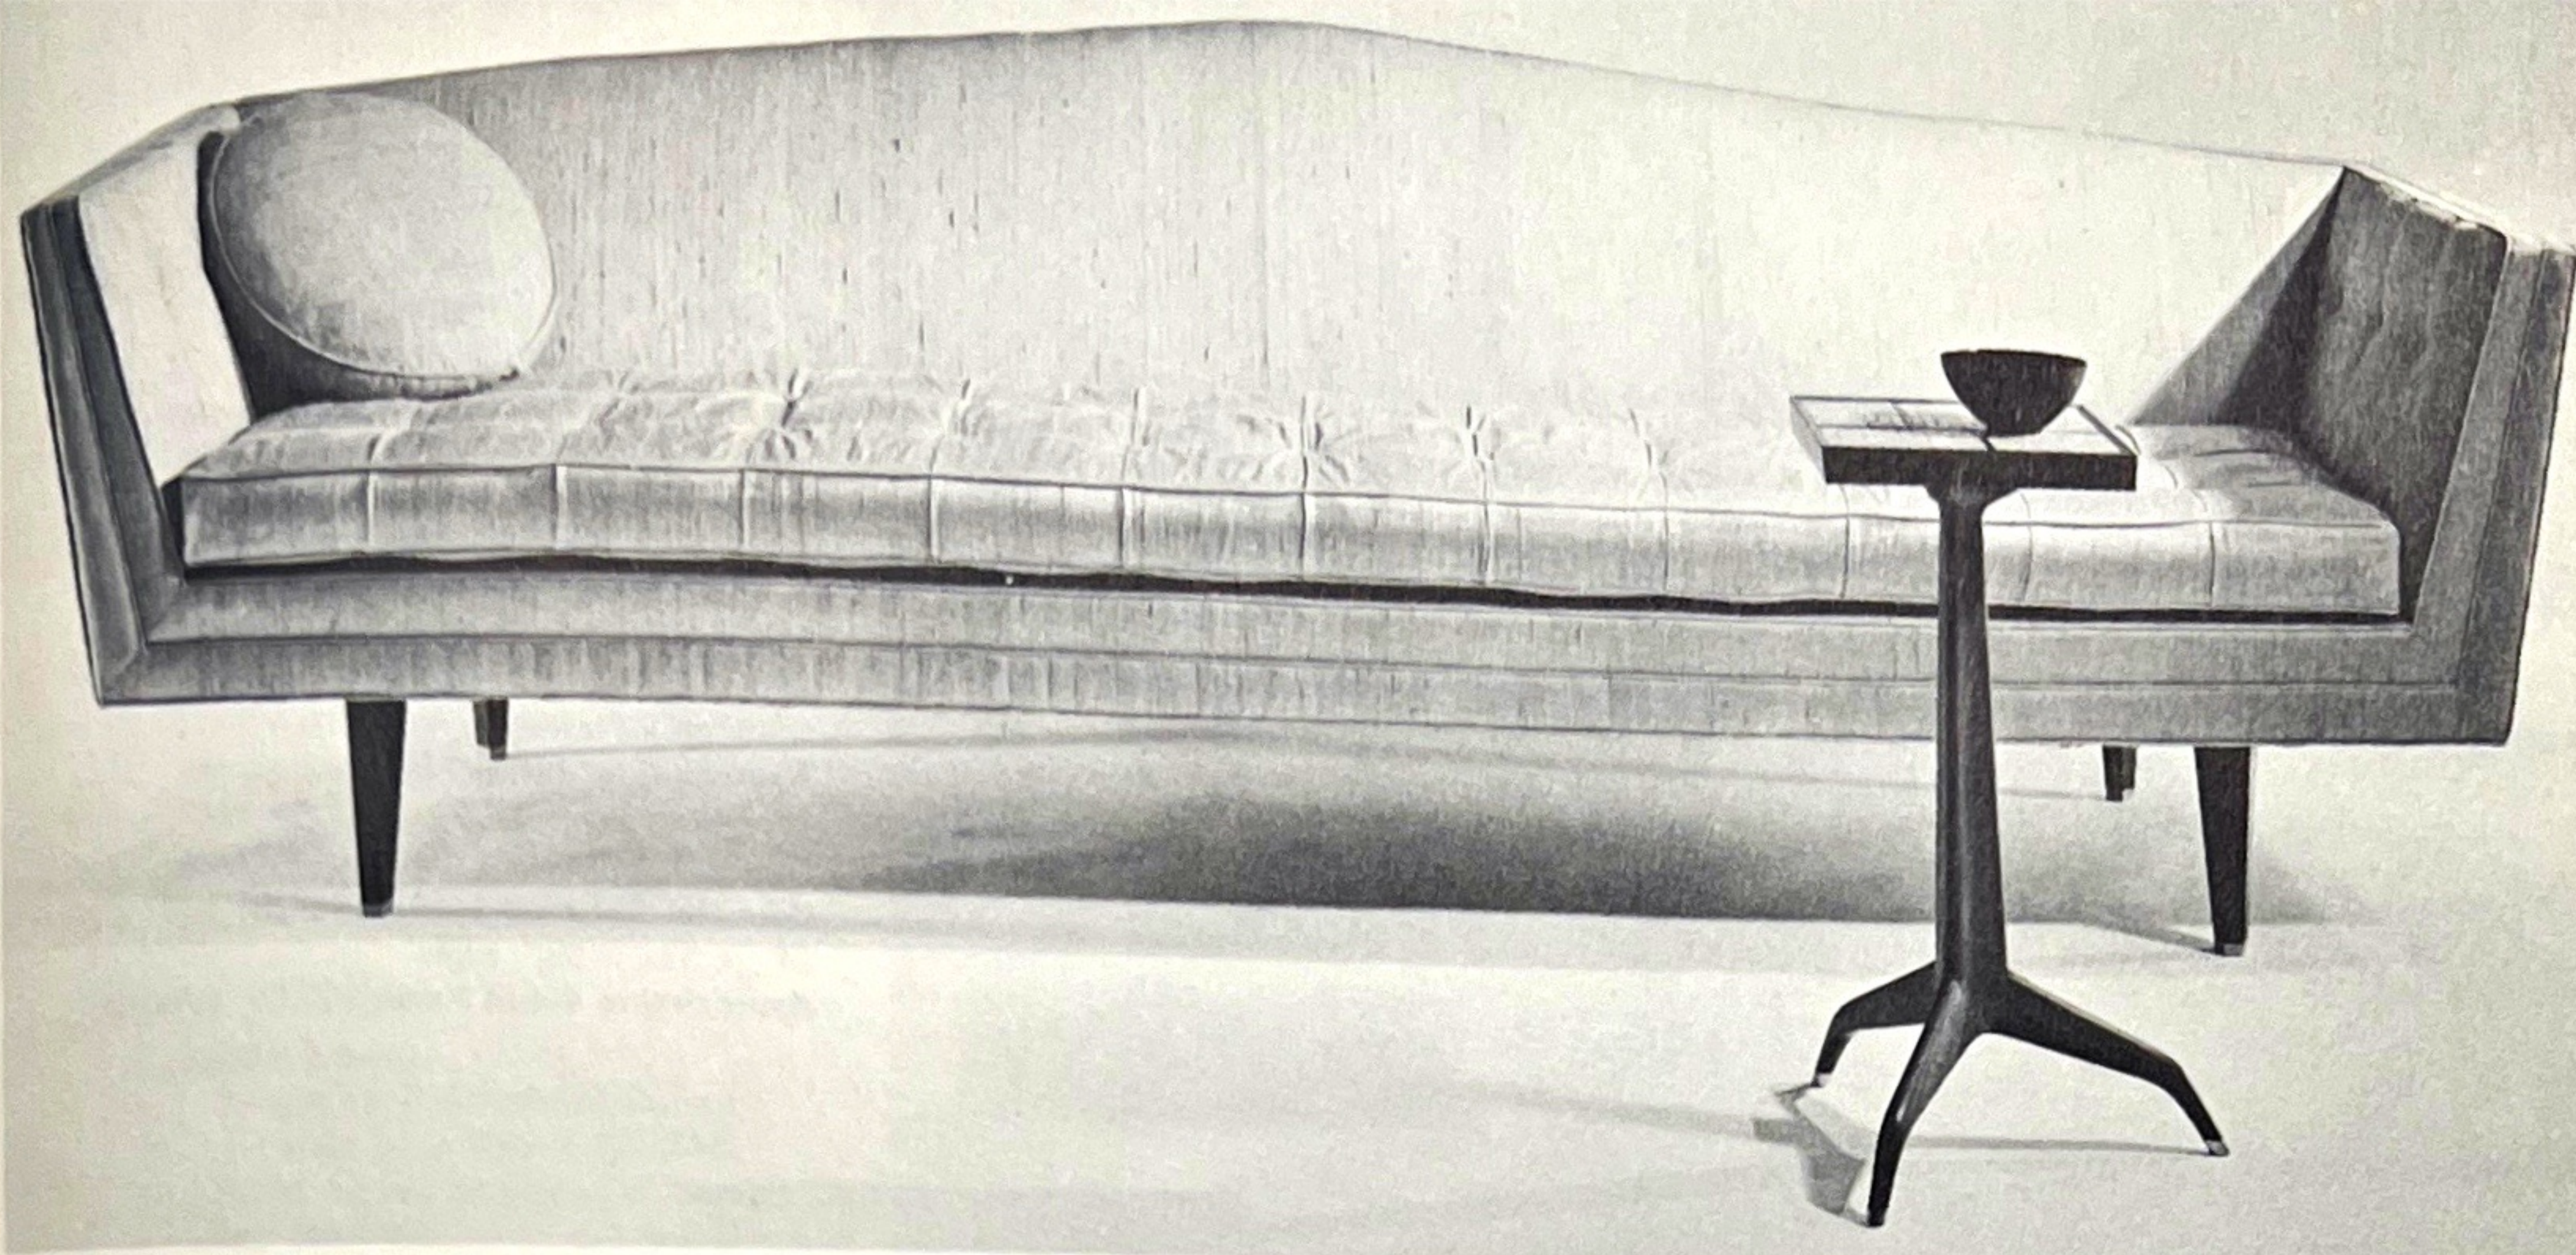

This model office, designed by d'Argout-Ferguson, Inc., especially for the National Office Furniture Association (NOFA) Convention, was designed for Gladys Freeman, Decoration Editor of TOWN & COUNTRY magazine. Natural flank leather, white leather draperies and mandarin red wool suede felt cover the walls. The woven ceiling is of wool suede felt and the floor is Renaissance white vinyl with gold stripping. The furniture is mandarin red & white, finished in Spruance special-formula new clear lacquer. Chairs are upholstered in white leather.

Virginia Cummings, Spruance's Color Consultant, designed this model office for Oscar Schoeffler, Fashion Director of ESQUIRE magazine, which was exhibited at the NOFA Convention. Of special interest is the black topped desk with base finished in strong bright green, a new custom color by Spruance, creators of "Wood Finish Originals".

ARCHITECTIVE FURNITURE, designed by Von Der Lancken & Lunquist for JOHN STUART, made its first public appearance at the NOFA Convention. This photo shows a small portion of the new line which is now in production and being presented to the contract and office furniture field.
